FROM THE NEW YORK PICAYUNE. I have recently attended the annual exhibition of ripstaving females who have sworn a solemn-oath to snatch the pantaloons from the legs of the tyrant Man, usurp the store pipe hat, and monopolize all the standing collars in the country. Was introduced by Damphool, who said some of the leaders in the movement were relatives of his -indeed I should have recognised at once several female Damphools without this friendly explanation. Lot of people present, all sympathizers with wronged women. The wardrobe of the feminines seemed to be in a transition state. as if as yet undecided whether to subside into pett'coats, or blossom into breeches; and if beauty had been a capital crime in The land, not one of them would ever have been accused, or ever suspected of the ofnce. * * * * * *
Then they began to do what they call business - couldn't see much business in it -it was all about the monster Man-how the monster Man was abusing frail Woman-how the monster Man wouldn't let frail Woman vote, and objected to frail Woman's wearing his pantaloons, and didn't want frail Woman to make the laws, and would rather have frail Woman stay at home and tend the babies, than go to Washington and try to govern the nation. And how the monster Man was cutting up all sorts of monkey shines with frail Wo man, and trying to keep frail Woman un-der his feet, instead of letting her "rise to her proper sphere, and fulfil her lofty mis how, in short, all the world was leagued against the seven or eight particular elderly women there congregated, and trying to pulverize them to enternal smash. All the unfortunate men who have been captured and converted into husbands by these females are living examples. of severe domestic discipline, and of the extent to which women can rule men when they once get the upper hand-and those of the women who are not supplied with a man look vicious and tomahawky to the last degree, and appear to be contemplating bands by force of arms. After a while Lucy Stone led off in the speech-making. She made an oration about the monster Man, and about his appropriating the property of frail Woman-she wanted the laws altered so that her husband couldn't sell her shoes and stockings, trade her best bonnet off for brandy and water, or bet her laced night-caps on poker without giving her a chance in the game-she said that if she ever got the law into her hands, she would, for the sake of the example, pawn all her hus band's linen, and leave him without a dol lar to go to a shirt-tail or for a new supply. (Here she looked at that unfortunate speci-Then Ernestine Rose speechified-Ernes tine was belligerent and went in for the fighting privileges of the monster Man; she wanted to vote, and join in when there was a row-she wanted to smoke and drink rum punches-she wanted to go to Congress and practice the art of war-she knew she could fight her way-she considered the use of pistols, bowie knives and bludgeons elegant accomplishment for a lady she said she had been perfecting herself in the science of the ring, and was "some" in a rough and tumble fight—she said she could strike from the shoulder and gouge her man, or bite his nose off in a manner worthy of the great masters -she had also invented a peculiar and complicated kick in the stomach, which she thought would be considered a master piece of genius, and an irresistible proof of the greatness of the female mind-she also wanted to learn smoking, tobacco-chewing and swearing. and many other little elegancies now usurp ed by the monster Man. She hoped soon to see the day when a woman can smoke her segar in the street without being stared at, and cock her heels up on the mantel piece in the bar room without being made the subject of impertment remark. The only thing she really despaired of was the beard-she would be willing to trade off half a dozen husbands for a sizable pair of whiskers-she had, she said, faithfully tried hair in igorators without number, but, she regretted to say, the symptoms were not encouraging-he had made her face a per feet hirsute hot bed, and for eight months had perseveringly anointed it three times a day with a preparatian "warranted to bring out a board on a pine log in six weeks," but the aly result thus far was pimples. * *

Nothing was said about rocking the cradle, or otherwise attending to the wants of the rising generation, from which I infer that it is a part of the great Woman's rights plan to import from somewhere some new breed of babies, with a ready made appefite for pork and beans, and without any preliminary craving for a milk diet.

I noticed too that the women were willing to assume the responsibilities of men except the work-there were plenty of applicants for the Presidency and for Congress, but there was no applicant for the blacksmith's sledgehammer and forge, no candidate for the carpenter's adze and jackplane, and not a single voice claimed the farmer's privilege of chopping cord wood or following the breaking up plough. Lucy would like to be President of the United States' but she wouldn't slig pointoes; Lucretia would like to be Minister to France, but she wouldn't drive a coal-cart, or get an honest living as a street scavenger; and although Paulina would have no objection to becoming Secretary of State, she is the last one in the world to roll up her sleeves and support herself by laying stone wall, digging cellars, or carrying a mortar hod up a forty foot ladder. They all wanted to be fed on the choicest cuts of beef and mutton, but not one was willing to water the oxen, or to feed the pigs.

To end up with, they passed the same old set of resolutions, denouncing in the strongest terms the monster Man, and de claring that the race might become extinct for all they would do towards the keeping up of the population.

I thought of the fox and grapes, and questioned if that ancient and respectable fable is not paralleled by the strong-minded Women and their babies, that they havn't got. The fox and the Women are bies equally impossible.

I really thought the world would be edified by the sight of Paulina in a blue shirt and sheep's-gray breeches, breaking pavingstones by the day-or Lucy Stone in carter's frock and stopy books, bading moles- man's eye has receive sixteen cents a lead, or Lucroin, with "see drop" in it.

Chinese Potato.

This new tuber has met barsh treatment many quarters. Among others, the Soil of the South strongly condemned its pretensions, after what Mr. Peabody regarded a fair experiment. In the December No. in an editorial, the result of an experiment is given, after one season's growth, up to Nov. 1, and the tubers are said to be the size of knitting needles. Subsequently, however, the editor says:

"Since the above was in type, we have dug one of the hills entire, and find that it turns out better than it promised. The lit tle nut that we planted produced two bifurcate tubers, running down two feet below the surface, gradually enlarging, until a good portion of the lower part measured three inches in circumterence; the flesh is of a snowy whiteness, and has an agreeable glutinous taste when raw. We cookedone. dropping it into boiling water; it cooked in five minutes by the watch; the skin parted freely from it, leaving the flesh as white as snow, and more delicate to the taste than the best Irish potato we ever tasted. If they continue to enlarge year after year, without losing their flavor, they will prove nvaluable to the South."

OUR PROLIFIC CORN. - We have so many nquiries as to how we planted and cultivated the field of corn that took the premi um at the Georgia Fair, as the best two acres of up land, yielding in this dry season ninety-five bushels to the acre, that we conclude to give the same statement through our columns that we submitted to the com

he land deeply; the first of April, we broke t up with a light shovel, run two furrows with a scooter, five feet apart, and in the bottom of this furrow, every three feet, dropped a table spoonful of guano; this we covered some two or three inches with earth, and on it planted the seed; when the corn was six inches high, we plowed it with a light shovel, and thinned it out to one alk to a hill; this was all the plowing it ever had; all the other culture was given with the horse hoe, together with the hand oe; as the season turned out, the corn was oo thick, as each seed produces tillers; it equires a greater distance than the comnon corn, unless the land is very strong, or has been liberally manured.

We often hear it sneeringly remarked. hat this is a corn that bears just as well on poor land as rich. We have never made my such c'aims for it. We have yet to learn that any crop can produce as much on poor land as rich, and those who purchase this corn and expect to get a great yield without food and labor for it, will be disappointed. But if a coin will make the yield that this has done for us the past season on comparatively poor land, with but one sack of guano to the acre, and a burn ng drought throughout all its blooming and fruiting time, is it not worth while to give it better land, more manure, and if ossible better culture? Our principles of culture are, deep tillage first, and surface culture to the growing crop. Those who bill for hoops at the dry good store or mil plant this corn will remember, that it must liner's. not be suckered, as the suckers or tillers from the root make ears like the main stalk .- Soil of the South.

LIGHTNING CONDUCTORS.—There is quite difference of opinion among scientific men in reference to the construction of the termination of lightning conductors-one pary maintaining that the present pointed terinations are wrong and that balls or knobs should be substituted, and the other that electricity is best discharged by pointed conductors. The first named position is taken by Mr. Hepourn and others, who agree that, for the absorption and transmission of an accumulated mass of electricity, an extended surface is required; and, as in the protection of buildings it is necessary to provide for the instantaneous absorption of a concentrated mass of electricity darting through the air in the form of a flash or ball, it is asserted that the conductor ought to terminate in one or more pear-shaped balls, having a surface sufficient to absorb at leart as much of the fluid as the descend ing rod is capable of earrying to the earth.

our various agents, informing us of cures effected in their immediate neighborhoods, warrant us in saying it is one of the best, if not the very best, Cough Medicine now before the public. It almost invariably relieves, and not unfrequently cures the very worst cases. When all other Cough preparations have failed, this has relieved the patient, as Diuggists, dealers in Medicines, and Physicians, can testify. Ask the Agent in your nearest town, what has been his experience of the effects of this medicine. It he has been selling it for any length of time he will tell you

Dalley's Magic Pain Extractor.

THERE never has been a discovery made in Materia Medica whereby pain can be so quickly allayed, and where parts in a high state of inflammation can be so rapidly reduced to their natural state, nor where wounds and sores can be so theroughly and rapidly heales, and decayed parts restored without either sear or defect, than with Dalley's Magical Pain Extractor.
In Cuts, Wounds, Sprains and Bruises—casualties to which children are constantly subject—the action of the genuine Dalley's Pain Extractor as ever the same! Now much Pain and Suffering may not thus be prevented! Moreover, life itsel is often dependent upon having at hand the Genuine Dalley Extractor, and for particulars of which I respectfully refer to my printed panaphlets, for the truth of which I hold myself responsible.

No case of Burns and Scald, no matter how severe, has ever yet, in any one instance, resisted the all powerful, pain subduing and healing qualities of the Dalley's Pain Extractor. For sale by Sept. 4 28 if FISHER & HEINITSH.
